Fishing Fleet Movements.

Sch. W. H. Cross was at Portland yesterday.

Provincetown.

Last year the stock of sch. Annie Perry was $30,757. This year that craft stocked $30,680.70, but the season's work of the present year was shorter than that of last season, the Perry's crew leaving her some weeks ago to join the new sch. Rose Dorothea. When the crew transfer was made and the Perry went into winter quarters, the Perry fishermen had earned for the season, $787.25. Since joining sch. Rose Dorothea this crew has been fortunate. This craft is now out on its last trip for the year, and it is believed that the share of the crew of the Perry—Dorothea for the present year will be nearly $900 per man, an amount that easily makes the crew the high-liner crew, but one, from Provincetown.

HERRING VERY SCARCE.

Prospects of Good Catch Shows But Little Improvement.

Sch. Tattler Loaded and Probably on Way Home.

A despatch from Middle Arm received here today states that herring are still very scarce. There are now about 14 crafts at Middle Arm and the same number at Northern Arm and the balance of the fleet at Woods Island, and along the shore to St. John's Beach, making all about 75 sail.

Capt. Alden C. Geel of sch. Tattler has a full cargo of salt herring, and probably got away yesterday or today. Barring accident and bad weather, the craft should reach here in a week. A week ago today sch. Corsair had 600 barrels, while there has been but one craft get away from Middle Arm since sch. sch. Mariner of Lunenburg, N. S.

Referring to the herring situation, the Bay of Islands Star of this week says:

"There has not been much improvement in the herring fishery of late. There has been nothing doing in Humber Arm, and it is hardly likely the fish will strike in here again this season. Middle and North Arms report fish very scarce, the nets set there do not average two barrels daily. It was thought that after last week's storm there would be better fishing, but so far the large body of herring has not made appearance. The best fishing, which at its best is poor, has been done around Woods Island and at Frenchman's Cove. It is not too much to presume that the body of herring may have forsaken us and gone to new haunts. There was a time when the success of our fisheries was credited to the wise legislation of our government; but such cannot be said of the Bay of Islands herring fishery this year."

Maiden Trip.

Sch. Juno, Capt. Stillman Hipson, arrived at Boston on her maiden trip yesterday with 32,000 pounds of fish. The vessel on the trip proved herself an able craft. She was designed by Thomas Irving, built by Bishop of this city.

FOR BEAM TRAWLING.

Porgy Steamer Now Used for This Style of Fishing.

Arrived at Fulton Market Wednesday with Good Fare.

The porgy steamer Joseph Wharton has been fitted for beam trawling and regarding her first trip, the Fishing Gazette says:

"The arrival of the steamer Joseph Wharton on Wednesday created considerable interest among the dealers in Fulton Market. The steamer is fitted with the beam trawling system, used extensively in England. The seines drag along beneath the hull of the steamer, and as a result the catches are larger than usual. The craft brought 30,000 lbs. of fish on Wednesday, majority of the catch being market cod. Prices dropped from 3 cents to 1 1/2 to 2 cents upon the arrival of the Wharton, but large sales at this figure were reported. The new system was examined by dealers, and they express an opinion that the Joseph Wharton will also revolutionize the trade if such large catches continue. The boat left Fulton Market as soon as the catch was unloaded, but will return next week with another catch. At this time the steamer will stay at her dock for a longer time than last week."

Thick Haze Accounts for Loss of Sch. Maud M. Story.

Crew Were All Night in Dories Before Landing.

Capt. Colin Nickerson, Seth Nickerson and Abraham Nickerson of the wrecked sch. Maud M. Story arrived home last night, coming to Boston from Yarmouth on the steamer Boston. Two of the crew, James Nickerson and B. Jeron, missed the boat and had to wait over in Yarmouth.

Capt. Nickerson, in speaking of the loss of the vessel, said:

"On Thursday we were off of Sambro, though how far off we did not know, as there was vapor on the water. The mate whose watch it was, saw the light shining dimly, and calculated it to be some miles away, but in reality it was close by. With a sudden shock we struck on Southwest Breaker, about two miles from Sambro. It was a glancing blow, and the schooner immediately slid off into deep water. But the blow had been sufficient to stove in her side, and the water poured in in great streams.

Immediately all hands leaped to the pumps, and worked with a will, but the pumps seemed to make no impression on the water in the well. The water was over the lockers, and she was listed heavily to port when we pushed off in two dories, and a few minutes later she disappeared under the water.

"It was then 10 o'clock at night. The sea was rough, and there was a heavy sea running, so that we did not attempt to land. We rowed about all night and when morning broke we were nearly exhausted, but able to get ashore. The villagers treated us well, and when we had recovered, drove us over to Halifax, where the American consular gave us transportation back to Boston. We had been able to save but little, so quickly did the vessel go down."

Halibut Packers on West Coast.

It is learned that the government has the knowledge that there is a great deal of poaching going on on the west coast by Yankee halibut schooners says the Ottawa, Can., Press. The poachers, however, know the exact whereabouts of the Kestrel of the preventive service as well as the men on board her, and the water is free from pirates whenever the ship arrives on the scene. It is believed when a second boat is put in service that plans can be arranged to overcome this difficulty and thus rid the waters of British Columbia of halibut poachers.—New York Fishing Gazette.

Swift & Co. and the Fish Business.

The editor visited Gloucester during the week to investigate the rumors that Swift & Co. (the meat packers of Chicago) would establish a salt fish business in that city. While nothing positive was learned, enough information was gathered to warrant us in stating that it is only a question of time when Swift & Co. will have a plant on a large scale. At present, they are handling fish through a well-known firm, until such time as they are ready to perfect their contemplated plans, which will probably be some time during the winter.—New York Fishing Gazette.
